DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

1. Claims 1-30 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Nedungadi et al. (US 5,722,997). Nedungadi et al. discloses measuring of tissue impedance, specifically cardiac impedance, by employing a charging circuit “arranged to charge the capacitor and the capacitor is adapted to produce a pulse when the capacitor is discharged. A means is provided for electrically transmitting the pulse through at least a portion of the patient’s body. A circuit develops signals representative of the voltages across the capacitor when charged and when said capacitor has been discharged to produce a pulse”(col. 2, lines 30-34).

As to claim 2, 11, 13 and 25, Nedungadi et al. discloses in claim 1, “a stimulator arranged to stimulate a patient’s heart; a charging circuit and a first capacitor, said charging circuit arranged to charge said first capacitor and said first capacitor adapted to produce a pulse when said first capacitor is discharged; means for electrically transmitting said pulse through at least a portion of the patient’s body; a first impedance measuring circuit for developing a first signal representative of the voltage across said first capacitor when charged and a second signal representative of the voltage across said first capacitor when said first capacitor has been discharged to produce said pulse, said first impedance measuring circuit periodically measuring the impedance, and a second impedance measuring circuit, means for detecting an impedance imbalance, and means for activating said second impedance measuring circuit when said impedance imbalance is detected" (col. 6, claim 1). Furthermore, the examiner considers the alternative impedance circuit to be the second impedance measurement circuits that is then sequentially employed after the first impedance measuring circuit.
